Marketing Update

Much has been going on this last month in the GLAC as we gear up for our rodeo in August.

Our chapter's marketing team has officially grown. We are pleased to include Chris Hulse who will be working on our program ads and press releases in addition to the two articles he has already written. His latest article installment is listed in part in this month's Chute and the subject is the handsome Robert Salcedo, the 2005 IGRA Rookie of the Year! Jason Coleman also is now investing time to help our chapter develop a long-term marketing strategy. Both Jason and Chris are brainstorming fundraising efforts for 2006!

El Entertainment will rerun the project that was filmed for the Golden Globes at the Oscars! This is more good press for our rodeo community. Again we thank Don Kendrick and Pepe Lovada for their help.

Sincerely,
Tim and Brian

Gay Rodeo's Rookie of the Year makes it look so easy

Just a few short months ago, Robert Salcedo went to a gay rodeo, stopped by a pool party, and got turned on. No, not that kind of turn-on. He got excited upon hearing he could sign up to ride a wild and bucking steer that day. He didn't need to think about it and wasn't scared of the danger. "I wanted to, so I did it. I'm a little crazy anyways." Robert simply told me as we sat down in West Hollywood and discussed his short (so far) but lively career in gay rodeo thus far.

Robert's enthusiasm is contagious as he talks about the support his family has given him, "My parents, brother, even my 90 year old grandmother has come to see me." Not bad for someone not having any rodeo or riding experience before last year. "I wish I had grown up on a farm, but I was born and raised here in L.A." Beginner's luck? Not in Robert's case. That first rodeo, he placed both days in several events, and ended up walking away with the IGRA Rookie of the Year award for 2005.

The host hotel for the board meeting will be our Rodeo Host Hotel.. The Four Points Sheraton in Kearney Mesa. See next page for hotel contact info. The Hotel will be honoring our Rodeo Rate for this weekend. Be sure to ask for the GSGRA Rate.

The Board Meeting will be held in a training room at the Jack in the Box Regional Offices on Balboa Avenue (approx 1.5 miles from the hotel). Full details on building access etc will be on our website and sent out to all State Board Reps as the weekend gets closer.

On Saturday night after the Board meeting we will be having a Bar Crawl. We have a bus chartered and will be taking the gang on a tour of the San Diego bars promoting our rodeo to be held a few weeks later. Bar Crawl tickets will be $20. Please email Mike D. at Treasurer@sandiegorodeo.com to reserve your spot. This should be a fun night full of surprises.. It IS April Fools Day ya know... so you better be prepared.

On Sunday morning we will be doing a quick visit to the rodeo grounds for anyone that wants to see the grounds and get a sneak peak at where they will be competing.

After the Rodeo Grounds visit we will be going horse back riding (for anyone who is interested). Cost should be around $45 per person. Details will be on www.sandiegorodeo.com soon.

After the Horseback riding (yes, there is more to do)... we will be headed to the HOLE for a fun beer bust party. This is not a "Rodeo Event", we are just heading over there.. Cowboy Hats and all ... and promoting our upcoming rodeo. Since you all KNOW how much fun the Hole can be, please make sure you have scheduled your flights out of San Diego either after 8pm or on Monday Morning. If necessary, we can run shuttle service from the Hole to the airport (a short 10 minute drive).

For any more details or questions, please contact Lewis Sanders at president@sandiegorodeo.com

Greater Palm Springs Chapter has booked the arena, moved the trailer into place, got some goats and the only thing missing is YOU.

Yes, that's right it's SCHOOL TIME here in the desert. So, please join us on March 11, 2006 at C.V. Vaqueros arena at 86200 Fargo Canyon in Indo, CA. It will be a day of lessons, workshops and above all have some fun. We encourage novice to advance skill levels of people to attend. Novices, here is your chance to try your hand at some rodeo events. Those of you who are advanced or have been contestants in a few rodeos, its also a good time to run the patterns and get some feed back on how you are doing. Our instructors are well versed in all categories of gay rodeo. With San Diego only a few weeks away here is your chance to get ready and have a good time with fellow members and new friends.

Cost is $25 a person (with 5 goes) and $5 a go after that, if you bring a friend you get 2 free goes.

More information and details can be found on our web site <http://www.gsgra.org/gpsc/> or at http://sports.groups.yahoo.com/group/GSGRA_GPSC/

Once you are dusted off, showered and fed, join us at Sidewinders. We will be having raffle drawings throughout the night. So come dance, drink and buy lots of raffle tickets. Remember the more you spend the better the chances you have to win.

Hoping to see many of you here in the desert on March 11, 2006.

The Chapter "Yard Sale" is fast approaching. The date is April 1, 2006. We have two locations from which to choose and will advise on the final choice.

We are in need of volunteers to help with the sale including pricing, display, sales and clean up. If you are available to help, please let myself, Terry Garrity or Glen Dickard know.

We are also in need of items to sell. Please check your attics, garages and storage facilities for unwanted items. Call any one of us to arrange for pickup.

I am also searching for someone to assist with membership including new member sign ups and sending out birthday cards. I need someone from the Inland Empire area as well as the Palm Springs area. If you are interested, please contact me.

Choosing the Right Saddle

I Want To Do Reining or Cutting. What Saddle Do You Recommend?

There are a lot of different brands of saddles available. Darn few of them are designed well for riding and training a performance horse. You definitely need a saddle that's designed to help you "ride in balance and sit the stop."

A saddle that was designed and built specifically for reining or cutting would come closest to what you want. Both of these designs have their advantages but remember, just because the manufacturer "calls" it a reining saddle doesn't mean it was designed "well" for reining.

The reason for this is that most saddle makers are craftsmen, not horsemen. Very few of them know how to ride a reining or cutting horse. It's kind of like trying to design a winning race car without ever having been in a race. Anyway, let's get down to the nitty-gritty and talk about the different elements of a saddle and what to look for.

Seat: Remember, you want a saddle that will allow you to sit the stop. First of all the seat of the saddle should lay close to the horse's back. The closer you can get to the horse the better. Anything more than a couple inches above the back is too high. Also, the lowest part of the seat should be the "middle" of the seat. This low part is called the "pocket". If the pocket is too far back you'll be forced against the cantle. Too far forward and you'll slide up on the swells.

Beware of too small a seat. You need enough room to slide forward and back a little. The average size woman usually needs a 16" to 16 1/2" seat. The average man, 16" to 17". Also, I personally like a seat that is built up in front. This gives a more secure ride. However, the pocket should still be in the middle of the seat.

Horn and swells: In reining your rein hand needs to be able to move unobstructed. Too high a horn or swells will get in the way. I'd want the horn no higher than 3". And the swells no higher than 7". I also like the horn to be small in diameter. In a cutting saddle, I like the swells to be a little higher, around 8". And the horn to be tilted a little forward. Actually, here on the west coast, a lot of folks will show their reiners in a cutting saddle.

Stirrup Leathers: This is one of the most critical parts of the saddle, yet the most overlooked. You want the stirrup leathers hung as far forward as possible. Ideally right behind the swells. The reason is simple. To be able to stay balanced on a horse that stops and turns hard, you've got to sit down in the saddle. I mean way down. If the stirrup leathers are hung too far back, your feet will be behind your center of gravity and cause you to fall forward. The result will be a loss of your balance, which causes the horse to come out of the stop. Also the stirrup leathers and fenders should be made of fairly thin, flexible leather. For precise leg cues, you don't want a lot of bulk between your leg and the horse.

Cantle: Don't buy one of those buckaroo saddles with an 6" high cantle. It'll hit you in the back. Quite a few of the "trail" saddles also have a steep, high cantle. Stay away from them.

Rigging: How your saddle is rigged is extremely important. And no compromise on rigging should ever be made when choosing a saddle. The saddle you want should have a Full-Double rigging. Some horses might be ok with a 7/8 rigging but never, ever buy a saddle that is 3/4 or center-fire rigged. Saddles that are rigged with less than the "full double" rigging will slide too far forward on the horse's back. Look at the way a horse is built. The narrowest part of his underline is right behind the front legs (girth). This is where the cinch automatically wants to go.

If a saddle with a 3/4 rigging is placed in the correct position on a horse's back, the position of the cinch will be back towards the horse's belly. It will just naturally migrate forward to the horse's girth, taking the saddle forward with it.

I also prefer the rigging Dee to be either in-skirt or dropped 3 or 4 inches below the swells (called a dropped rigging). This allows for the tree to pull down more evenly on the horse's back. Both will be less bulky and give you closer contact with your horse, too.

Tree: Make sure the tree fits your horse's back. If it's too narrow or too wide your horse won't be comfortable. Double check to be sure there is enough clearance between the horse's withers and the gullet (a minimum of 1").

A big problem with a lot of saddle trees, is that the bars don't have enough curve to fit the horse's back. If your horse is a little sway-backed and the saddle tree is real straight, your horse is going to get a sore back.

When in doubt about a saddle, have a knowledgeable trainer take a look at how it fits your horse. His opinion might save you and your horse some grief.
